FM-217-01 Collapse / Rupture / Rebuild: Themes and Strategies for Moving Pictures Practice Credits: 3 S. Kahn

M Tu W Th F 9:00AM - 6:00PM Room: 8

'People should be taught what is, not what should be. All my humor is based on destruction and despair. If the whole world were tranquil, without disease and violence, I'd be standing in the breadline---right back of J. Edgar Hoover.' -Lenny Bruce In this studio class we'll explore notions of rupture, collapse and regeneration as thematic frameworks for making film/video works. Breakages, splits, ruin and transformation will underpin our investigations along with strategies for regenerating, rebuilding, and re-using what's been broken. We'll seek out the destructive and productive aspects of collapse as they occur in social structures, in language, in film grammar, in psychology, philosophy, fiction and lived experience, in order to re-work our understandings of failure, stability and change. Readings, screenings and discussions will build context and provide support for work on student projects to be presented for critique. Some of artists, filmmakers and writers we'll investigate: Mike Kelley, William Greaves, Mike Davis, Angela Davis, Ed Atkins, Dodge/Kahn, Chantal Akerman, Antonin Artaud, Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor, Beavis and Butthead, John Cassavetes, David Foster Wallace, Julia Kristeva, Peter Watkins, Guillermo Gomez-Peña, George Saunders, Gertrude Stein.

HTCA-102-01 Art Since 1945 Credits: 3 L. Brawner

Tu Th 9:00AM - 12:00PM Room: 18

This course traces the history of art from the 1950s to the present, examining works in conjunction with the social, political, and philosophical events that inform and are touched by them. Particular attention will be paid to the shifting nature of the art object; the relation between art and the political (broadly defined), artists' engagement with the institutional structures of their production and display, and the shifts in representational practice signaled by postmodernist and postcolonial theories. In all of these arenas, we will think together about how histories get written, artists get celebrated, consistency gets produced, and at what cost.

HUMN-221-01 Other Ways of Reading: Histories of Print, Narrative &silence Credits: 3 S. Sauer

M W 9:00AM - 12:00PM Room: 18

What do quilts, fairy tales, protest posters, diaries, spoken word poetry and graphic novels have in common? For starters, they share a publishing history that is outside the mainstream and that influences alternative and artist publishing today. For the rest, you'll have to join the search as we chart histories of literacy, technology, empire and silencing to gain a clearer understanding of the roles print and narration have played in the lives of humans for millennia. We'll also look at how these histories speak today through the work of contemporary book artists, visual artists and writers such as Frans Masereel, Lynd Ward, Arthur Bispo do Rosario, Los Tres Grandes of Mexican Muralism, Leandro Gomes de Barros, the Royal Chicano Air Force, Sun Ra, Coco Fusco, Studs Terkel, Sally Alatalo, Enrique Chagoya, Tia Blassingame, Simon Cutts and others.

IN-215-01 Italy: Past and Present Credits: 3 Mark Van Proyen

TBD

Italy: Past and Present is an off-site travel class exploring the cultural tension that exists between the traditional Renaissance and pre-Renaissance art of northern Italy and the globalized spectacle of contemporary art as it will be presented at the 58th Venice Biennale during the summer of 2019. Using selected readings and lectures complemented by eight days of site visits, the class will examine the material and historical background of a wide variety of key master-works of Italian art from 1300 to 1600, and contrast their artistic effects, iconography, and cultural contexts with those of the many international artists who are selected to participate in this summer's Biennale. Tuition + $2300 course fee.

IN-391-01 Honors Interdisciplinary Studio Credits: 3 T. Sullivan

M W 9:00AM - 12:00PM Room: 117

The Honors Interdisciplinary Studio is intended to advance the student's development of independent research and projects through one-on-one discussions with a faculty advisor. Students must submit a completed Honors Interdisciplinary Studio contract (with faculty signature) and a portfolio of work and/or project proposal to be considered for this course. Only students accepted to the course will be eligible to register and receive an individual studio workspace. Students will meet with their faculty advisor at least three times during the term for continuing guidance and evaluation. At the end of the semester, each student will be required to present a completed body of work or project to a faculty review committee.

Prerequisite: Senior Standing. Application Required.

Satisfies: Studio Elective Requirement

IN-399-01 Independent Study Credits: 3 P. Klein

TBD

Academically outstanding undergraduates in their junior year may propose an independent study project of one semester in length, to be undertaken away from the Bay Area. Independent study projects will be subject to the approval of the Dean and Vice President for Academic Affairs and a faculty sponsor. A liberal arts component requires an additional proposal. Independent study credit shall not exceed 12 units for studio credit and shall not exceed 3 units in liberal arts. The total studio and liberal arts credit allowable for independent study is 15 units. Only one semester or one summer session of independent study shall be allowed for any student. Tu Th 1:00PM - 6:45PM Room: 8
 Tu Th 1:00PM - 6:45PM Room: 16A

This course will focus on installation art, collaborative objects, and site oriented works. By looking beyond the discreet art object, we will examine the expanded space or site. Students will create works that engage their physical surroundings, creating a dialog between objects and space. Students will experiment with installing art work in multiple sites to see how it changes and responds to different locations. Working both indoor and outdoor, the class tests the challenges and limitations which come with each. Video and performance is brought into the installation process, adding a time-based dimension to our sculptural works. Thinking about installations as fragments or artifacts of performances, this class casts a new light on the nature of installation art. In addition to lots of making, students will further engage in the genre of installation by researching and viewing installation art. Students are expected to participate in class discussions and attend all class field trips. Most importantly, students are expected to work with curiosity and great enthusiasm, feeling brave and sometimes vulnerable as they experiment in new and different areas. Did you ever want to make something outside of your comfort zone? Install your work in different sites? Experiment with unusual spaces? This is the class for you!

Th 1:00PM - 6:45PM Room: 1

In this course, painters, photographers and printmakers will approach their particular medium of concentration through the lens of reimagining its purpose and power through various replication processes in printmaking. Through monotype, screen print, collage, digital printing and image transferring techniques, students will effectively remix their "original" works. This may include processes such as printmaking, paintings, drawings and photos as the initial starting point of a work, which will be reconsidered through the context of multiples, abstractions and new image based perspectives. Ultimately, the idea of abstraction, multiplicity, parody and revisiting the original works will be considered in the production of a new body of work meant to explore original ideas under new context and production in revisiting old and new ideas toward a stronger development of work. This course is designed for students who wish to push, strengthen and complete works in progress or a new body of work within the concentrated eight week summer session.

W 1:00PM - 6:45PM Room: 20A

This class will be a workshop for students to develop individualized projects through group critiques and collaboration over the course of the term, allowing students to either create new bodies of work, or refine existing works, all the while investigating various manners and strategies of depiction in photography and video. The class will focus on digital capture, editing, and output, with possibilities for alternative and analog processes. Course content includes color theory, fine art printing, and techniques for sequencing and display. The state of photography today, as it relates to contemporary art practices and the public at large, where everybody is now a photographer will be focal point for the class. What is the potential for image-making as a cultural contribution with so many images already around us all the time? What significance does the photograph have as a document? How might alternative approaches - in video, or abstraction, appropriation, or hybrid models - push the medium, and artists' work, forward? The class will utilize not only photographic prints, but also some video and online display. An important outcome for the class will be new ways to engage our world visually. Class participants will study a diverse group of photographers and image-makers, and learn how our own practices are becoming shaped by the current image-making culture. Students working in a range of various media and approaches are encouraged to take the class.

CS-509-01 The Social Self: Theories of Structure, Agency, and Society Credits: 3 T. Anderson

M W 7:30PM - 10:30PM Room: 3LH

This course explores changing concepts of personhood, identity, and social responsibility through the examination of key texts from the 20th and 21st Centuries. The effects of modernism, the development of capitalism, and the global interplay of nation states and corporate entities will be explored through assessing the premises and relative strengths of structural-functionalism, conflict theories, and writings on globalization. The rise of psychological theory will be used to introduce anthropologists' interpretive schools and symbolic interactionism. The development of feminist theory, while utilizing a matrix of domination and hegemonic processes, will be both linked to, and distinguished from, other mid-century social movements. The course will conclude with considerations of the self both as the project and product of our age, and as the wellspring of ethics, social responsibility, and global justice.

Artwork frequently encompasses and includes work exhibited in a variety of media, including video, projections, sound, photography, sets and installations, live or recorded performance, and public interventions. This studio class will concentrate on providing students with experience in the basic tools and techniques for creating multi- and trans-disciplinary work, exploring and instructing skills in installation, photography, film, video, time-based work, text, sound, and more. Instruction will include creating projects using the Adobe Creative Suite (Photoshop, Illustrator, and InDesign), video and time-based work in Adobe Premiere, and in making and documenting projects, performances, and installations. Special attention will be given to the process of editing time-based and 2D work. Drawing from a wide range of styles and methods, documentary, performance, dramatic narrative and experimental filmmaking, the course will assess how chosen modes of material and documentation affect meaning and presentation of a work, exploring effective strategies for production and dissemination from a technical, methodological, and philosophical perspective. GR-592-01 MFA Intermediate Review Credits: 0 Z. Barakeh
The Intermediate Review takes place at the end of the second semester of the MFA Program, near completion of 30 units. The review is an evaluation of whether or not the student is prepared to advance to MFA candidacy. It is an assessment of the development of the student's ideas and methods throughout the first year of the program and a forum for critical feedback from the student's committee. Students who fail to meet the standards of the review committee will be asked to re-enroll in Intermediate Review and to re-present their work at the beginning of the fourth semester. HTCA-509-01 Dysplastic Practices: Historical Exhibitionism and the Curated Contemporary Credits: 3 L. Richard

Tu 9:00AM - 12:00PM Room: 3LH

This hybrid online/onsite art history course will explore modes of exhibition in a world in which retail spaces, social media accounts, and private lives are increasingly managed, manicured, and "curated." How does such framing reflect and reinforce-or call out-the gap between representation (in all its forms) and the "real" (in all its illusions)? We will begin by glancing back to the early modern period that separated the viewing subject from the observable world and gave rise to collections and exhibitions. We will then look at modes of visual display in the nineteenth-century-panoramas, photography, World Expos, zoos, advertisements, guide books, genre painting, department store windows-to consider the interconnected roles of technology, geopolitics, economics, and artistic representation in shaping modernity. Finally, we will use case studies of twentieth-century exhibitions and the contemporary phenomenon of "artist as curator" to ask how strategies of display-both coercive and disruptive-influence not just art practices (like yours) and histories (like mine)-but manifest a collective intellectual unconscious and spill over into the everyday performance and surveillance of real and virtual selves. A series of online readings beginning in mid-May will prepare us to actively participate in the SFAI Summer Symposium which will also be organized around the topic of curation/exhibition. Discussion threads and questions from the symposium will shape the fabric our remaining classes; because of the early online phase, we will meet only once (instead of twice) a week for the eight-week session.
